

Rezone Study – Rezoning of Residential Zoned Properties with Places of Assembly to Public Facilities Zoning (PF) District

The City of Sunnyvale is conducting a study to consider rezoning residential sites currently occupied by Place of Assembly and Recreational uses to the Public Facilities (PF) Zoning District. Places of Assembly include places of worship and community centers.

The City is following up from a 2006 study to determine whether certain sites should be rezoned in an effort to preserve these uses within an appropriate zoning designation (Public Facilities-PF). The previous study noted the loss of Assembly uses in residential neighborhoods and the subsequent conversion of these sites to residential developments. The purpose of the study is to consider preserving these uses in logical locations while discouraging relocation to less compatible areas (industrial property) or locations outside the City.
